Recent Architecture and Landscape at Stanford: A Self-Guided Tour

Introduction

Over the last decade, many trustees, administrators, donors, faculty, and students have taken an active interest in the enhancement and preservation of the character of the Stanford campus—both its buildings and its landscape. This has led to a rejuvenation of the quality of the campus and its sense of place. This guide provides information about the history of this decade of (re)development and adds insight for those who take the actual tour.

While this brochure and the walking tour highlight new structures at Stanford, many historic buildings and landscapes have been recently restored and renewed. For further information about the overall grounds and buildings of Stanford University, refer to The Campus Guide: Stanford University, An Architectural Tour (Joncas, Neuman, and Turner, Princeton University Press, 1999), available at the Stanford University Bookstore.

In addition to the new buildings and places highlighted in this tour, other recent campus buildings are noted below.
